Bit of an overkill (if you ask me), but there are many of them out there, and the ones I've found are based on these specifications. EDIT: It's a rhythm/tempo controller device.

A good example of this type of instrument is a metronome. Q: SignalR on IIS I have the following client-server architecture: A WPF client that is using SignalR to connect to a WEB API A Web API that is hosted on a separate IIS server, via an MVC project I can connect and send messages to/from the client in both test environments, IIS hosted, and an Azure IIS hosted. However I can't seem to figure out how to connect to the Web API from a separate MVC project on my dev machine, even when publishing to an external server. IIS hosted: var connection = new HubConnectionBuilder().WithUrl("") .Build(); var proxy = connection.CreateHubProxy("Client"); proxy.On("ReceiveMessage", (message) => { string result = message.ToString(); Console.WriteLine(result); }); client.Start().Wait();

In addition, payments under the Supplemental Agreement may be subject to tax benefits unavailable to the companies under the original agreements. Such benefits include the IRS ruling that gains realized from transactions involving certain types of plant assets qualify for a special 35 percent tax rate. See Yale Electric Corp. v. United States, 321 U.S. , at 666, 64 S.Ct. , at 719, 88 L.Ed. . Moreover, the companies may be required to reduce the purchase price of the assets to a level below the fair market value if the government subsequently determines that the fair market value exceeds the price the companies paid. See 15 U.S.C. 29(c). Any such net financial benefit would not be available to the General Crowe Affiliates and Acushnet-Dow. Under Regulation S, an ESOP, by its nature, is a plan for facilitating or encouraging employee stock ownership. The regulations expressly prohibit an ESOP from directly or indirectly participating in the assets of the sponsoring company, or from holding interests "in a manner that is prohibited by law" or in a manner otherwise deemed by the IRS to be illegal or fraudulent. The company may seek an exception, by way of a grandfather exception, to these prohibitions when making acquisitions. See 26 C.F.R. 1.892-1(b)(1). See also Letter-Ruling 77-208, 1977-1 C.B. 705. Under both the Tax Code and the regulations, an ESOP would be eligible for a tax deduction only to the extent that it is established and maintained for a purpose consistent with the provisions of the Internal Revenue Code, as more fully described in the regulations. However, it is the taxpayer's burden, and not the IRS, to establish the purpose for which the ESOP is established and maintained. The taxpayer must demonstrate both the purpose for which the ESOP was established and maintained, and that the contributions constitute a "qualified" plan, as defined by the Code. In the instant case, the taxpayer has not carried its burden of demonstrating that the contributions to the ESOP were for a purpose consistent with the Internal Revenue Code.
